

ABSTRACT

A method and a device for starting an engine system, especially of a vehicle, which make possible a start of the 5 engine system that is as quick and comfortable as possible.
In this context, it is tested for a start request whether a starter-free starting method leads to a successful start of the engine system. For the case in which the test result is negative, the engine system is started automatically using a 10 starter.